719 BOYLSTON STREET
BOSTON, MASS.

November 14, 1938.

The Society takes pleasure in announcing the new and complete edition of René Warcollier's book - EXPERIMENTAL TELEPATHY - the most comprehensive collection of data on the subject published to date.

Refreshingly easy to read, this book succeeds in making the subject as fascinating to every reader as any mystery novel, though at the same time there is no sacrifice of scientific approach or treatment.

In addition to presenting unmistakable proof of telepathy, M. Warcollier is probably the only investigator in this field who has correlated facts and observations bearing upon the important question of what mental processes are involved, for the aid of those who are interested in trying similar experiments. What characterizes a good "sender"? a good "receiver"? What conditions are necessary to create a favorable environment? This knowledge may mean the success or failure of an experiment, and every student interested in the phenomena will want to learn of them.

Illustrated directly from the drawings made by M. Warcollier's group of telepathic experimenters (including a long distance series between New York under the direction of Prof. Gardner Murphy of Columbia University and M. Warcollier in Paris), this volume not only offers suggestions for forming experimental groups, but contains valuable theories concerning the phenomena, and discusses such questions as

*** The Nature of Telepathy

*** The Relation of Telepathy to the Subconscious
and the Unconscious

... and fourteen more interesting chapters. M. Warcollier, a French Chemical Engineer and member of the Research Committee of the Boston Society for Psychic Research, strikes a new and more mature note in contributing this authoritative study to the literature of Psychic Research.

We believe you will enjoy reading this book today, and tomorrow will be proud of owning this edition of a book of unique value. An order blank is enclosed for your convenience.

Sincerely,

F. W. Allison
