TIBETAN—RUSSIAN—ENGLISH DICTIONARY
with Sanskrit parallels,
by Yu.N.Roerich

The Dictionary, with a total volume of almost 180 author's sheets, is based on manuscript materials collected by Yuri Nikolayevich Roerich (1902-1960), a distinguished Russian Tibetologist. In the scope and diversity of vocabulary and in the thoroughness of presentation of grammatical material the Dictionary surpasses all hitherto published Tibetan dictionaries. It embraces the vocabulary of the Tibetan written language going as far back as the 7th century to the middle of the 20th century. The Sanskrit equivalents included as parallels facilitate the reading both of original monuments of Buddhist literature and of those translated from Sanskrit.

The Dictionary is designed for Tibetologists — linguists, historians and literary scholars — as well as for students of the history of Buddhism in India, China, Mongolia, Japan and countries of South-East Asia.

Subscription Terms

The Dictionary is printed in 11 issues the closing one containing an index of the Sanskrit words and expressions.

The approximate price is 30 roubles.

Foreign readers are advised to contact the book-selling firms of their countries which trade in Soviet literature
