Dear Miss Lichtmann:-

Due to the fact that I did not get the date in mind for the Friendship Dinner the other night, I missed seeing you to talk about the possibility of a lecture course for next year. I have today made out a list of ten lectures all to be illustrated with lantern slides, as follows:

1. In which we make a geographical Peregrination of the world of the Ancients
2. How the famous Near East has begun to unlock its forgotten treasures
3. Why Egypt refutes the traditional silence of its Nilotic Sphinx
4. In which we see "The Isles of Greece."
5. How Greece oertops the world in Artistry!
6. How Ancient Roman cities rise from the dead.
7. In which we build Rome in a day.
8. Rome speads the Pax Romana.
9. In which we see the festivals, sports, and games of the Greek and Romans
10. Modern and medieval glances at the ancients.

Your idea, which I thought good, was that you would get out a notice which would go to the people in the Museum, offering the full course of ten lectures at five dollars each. I believe we could get 100 or more people.

Cordially yours
