Dear Mr. Fosdick:

This is to tell you that we are much interested in the Boerich books, which indeed you know from past correspondence. However, we are not always sure where and how to obtain them, and their scarcity these days is a problem. Would you be kind enough to give us a complete list of the books published in English, where obtainable, and the price. I understand that some were not printed by the Boerich Press.

With this information we may be able to give some practical help. We are beginning to publish a small magazine, sample copy of which is enclosed. You will note we have given a review of "The Fiery World" in its pages. This column "The Golden Lotus Bookshelf" will be continued, and we would be glad to mention the Boerich books again.

Would you also tell us if there is any objection to quoting small paragraphs or sentences underneath articles, to finish pages, if we give the name of the author and the book? We are somewhat uncertain about copyrights, and would like to hear from you. But as we feel that we are working along the same lines of thought, though differently, we believe you would not mind giving us permission if it is necessary.

If any of your friends would be interested in the magazine, please send us their names, so that we can send them a sample copy.

With kind regards,

Very truly yours,

A very small, mimeographed magazine - should we permit them to quote from the Books?
