Dear Professor Roerich:

Your letter of September twenty-fourth has been forwarded to me from France. It was most kind of you to take the trouble to read "Man, the Unknown," and to write me of your interest in it.

Your book, "Fiery Stronghold" and your article, "Le Beau," are doubtless at my home in France, and have not been forwarded for fear of their going astray in the mails. I appreciate your thoughtfulness in presenting me with copies, and shall look forward to reading them when I go to France again.

With my thanks, believe me

Yours very sincerely,

Alexis Carrel
