My dear Mr. Roerich,

Your name was suggested to me by a Theosophist here, as one who might help me in my search. As soon as I can arrange other matters, I would like to go to the Orient - there to find an answer to my needs, which I have been unable to find here: A chance to work, study, expand -- under the guidance of a spiritual Teacher, that I may, in turn, be of service to humanity and show my gratitude to the Masters. Here I find books - lectures - mind stuff - organization - with no living breath of love or inspiration, so that the soul smothers under its own loneliness.

I have no right to ask you to take time or trouble to answer me, save that your heart of love and compassion will recognize the call of my fervent desire.

I am lost and aimless in a Western world - (not aimless in the sense of being without a vocation - as I have one) but inwardly, a strange soul in a strange place.

Help me with your gracious suggestion. Tell me whom to write or contact - and where to go, and I shall be eternally, through all our rosary of lives, indebted to you.
