Revered Sir,

Herewith I have the great honour to forward a preliminary copy of my poem "One God, One Empire, One Mankind", largely devoted to the discussion of international Peace. May I request you to be so good as to accept the same, and time permitting, to be so good as to oblige me with your valued opinion of the poem. Thanking you,

I beg to remain,

Revered Sir,

Yours sincerely,

Revered Sir,

I most thankfully acknowledge receipt of your kind card containing your valuable opinion about my booklet and your illuminating pamphlet, which when put together with all that the recent issue, now to hand, of The Indian Magazine, (B.M. Press, Mangalore) says of your Honoured Self and of The Peace Banner Mission, revealed to me the wonderful sublimity of the Ideal you have set before yourself and which you strive with energy and zeal to hold up to mankind.

The seats of great oracles are mute because servants of Truth are few, and the procession of man has passed by in its unrecking march, nothing more than a mad harlequinade, laying often its vandal hands on the pantheon of True Beauty, nailing the Children of Light on the Cross. Not a voice uprose in protest or demur, while the great the true and the beautiful fell, and a darkness covered the earth. Many a gospel, noble and true, has suffered for lack of enlightened advocacy, and Art no less. That unchampioned Art has at last found a venerable protagonist in you, is matter enough for felicity. That Art has been established as the real covenant of God with man, and is as such the real unifier of mankind, its real Messiah and its undivided Mother Church, we owe to you. For this the gratitude of every age is due unstintingly to you. A very poor servant of Art myself, I tender my humble heart-felt homage ~~to you.~~ at your reverend feet.

A cultural association, intended to foster and preserve the arts of this country, is going to be set on foot here very soon, and it is our prayer that we will have your blessings for this enterprise.

Yours sincerely,

Uma Maheswer
