Dear Professor Roerich:

From snow-covered Arsuna, greetings. Night before last, the heaviest snow in six years fell here, but it is warming up now. The sun is shining and the mountains are beautiful in their new white coats.

Since our last letter we have a new member of Arsuna. Linde Gayl, a director of the Noyes School of Rhythm, has joined us. She is a real artiste, and, in addition, a charming personality - a big asset to our work. She has already begun teaching, and an article written by her was printed in the Sunday magazine section of a local paper. We sent one of her articles to Psychology magazine in New York, but haven't had time yet to hear whether it is accepted. One of my poems is to be featured in the January number of that magazine, I understand. Will send you a copy when it appears. I imagine Clyde has told you the Museum of New Mexico has engaged her to make a lecture tour of the state in January, speaking on your work and art. We are deeply pleased and thrilled at this recognition and opportunity to promote the work.

I send also the warmest greetings to Madame Roerich, and wish her the best of health.

Sincerely yours,

L. L. Partlow
