I have great pleasure in introducing to the public these works of Art executed by Sri Kora Ramamurthi, these Paintings upon fabrics, etc. executed with indigenous Vegetable dyes, derived from the techniques of the ancient Art of Kalamkari. This is thus a most happy marriage of traditional craft and techniques with modern sensibility and aesthetic imagination. The pictures speak for themselves. But the sensitive critic can at once see that, particularly in certain landscapes, and even in portraits, these vegetable dyes, painted upon cloth or silk and made fast by old techniques preserve a suggestiveness of line, form, and colour, that oils cannot always accomplish. The exhibition is most interesting and I wish it all success, and the appreciation of the discerning.
