

Copy
November 29, 1932.

Beloved Friend:

I am writing you this time in English as I would like my letter to go out with this boat. I know your generous heart will overlook my prolonged silence, but times have been filled with work, aspirations and achievements, and many a strenuous battle because of general depression and glorious victory. Hence the silence. But in my heart you were living as vividly as ever, and perhaps more so, because I know you have been unwell and still have kept striving in your labor and accomplishment in our great Cause. Glory to you beloved Friend.

I hope by now that your health is restored. There is such a tremendous vitality in you that your inner strength will always conquer any ailment.

I have watched with intense interest all the developments of the Second Conference in Bruges, and admire your wonderful spirit and work, as well as all the endeavors of our European co-workers applied for the furtherance of this epoch-making idea of our beloved Master.

As to myself, I am working hard, and as enthusiastic as ever, and am filled with the realization of a great future for which nothing is too big for me to sacrifice.

The letters and guidance we receive from the Himalayas is inspiring and uplifting. It is such a joy to labor in their name for the World Cause.

My next message to you, I promise you will be written in the tongue we both love so much . . .

My heartiest thoughts and love to you, dear and beloved friend.

Wholeheartedly and devotedly,

Esther J. Lichtman