

- Copy -

45-55 48 Street, Woodside, L.I., N.Y.
11 December, 1946.

Dear Mrs. Motter,

Mrs. Fosdick has had additional work laid upon her shoulders and is forced to let a few of us share in her correspondence, probably for some time to come. She asks me to tell you she sends her thoughts and greetings. I shall be glad to answer from time to time any questions of yours about the work, the Teaching, that fall within my scope.

From your letter it appears that you are passing through a stage all must experience in some life, as humanity faces its journey upon the Path. To many it is a slow and tedious part of the journey, though we are told, and many have proved for themselves, that reliance upon Hierarchy, looking ahead, realizing the comparative values of what we forget (being past) and what we seek to understand as Truth (our common Divinity) - this will shorten it immeasurably. As time and strength are given you, perhaps you might consider using a method some of us find helpful, that of selecting the special "most needed" quality of the moment and then looking through the books for references to that quality. Always, of course, with the idea of actively using what is discovered. It helps beyond words in the unremitting steady striving toward impersonality, toward true understanding, toward courage, patience, tolerance - all blessed and constructive and selfless attainment.

May I say that you must realize we are none of us alone in our journey and that each one's courage, each one's creative thought, must necessarily help others, near and far, known and unknown.

You have my thoughts and hopes as a fellow striver and the love of a comrade on the Path.

Faithfully and sincerely yours,