Grace Hallam's letter of 10 November, 1946.

Dear Lou Jennings,

Already your letter has been in my hands for two weeks and it is high time it was answered, so I'll make good use of this long holiday week-end. Fortunately our business office closes on Saturday mornings now, and that gives me more time for household duties, shopping, etc. All week long I'm engaged in advertising work as a copywriter, and what remnants of leisure I have belong to the evenings. So when I tell you that the list of references is not progressing very rapidly, you will understand. Am wondering if it is necessary to copy out again all the various paragraphs or whether a mere list is sufficient. Of course it would be an advantage to have the paragraphs before one without the trouble of looking them up.

Was very happy to have the latest instalment from "the Letters." Of them all, my attention was attracted to the one which says "Read less - meditate." If we followed that instruction, we would have a deeper understanding of what we read, and it could not help but awaken our own powers.

Am glad that you found such appeal in the idea that the books are written on "spiral levels", but I mustn't take credit for it, as that insight which you do well to call profound came not from me but from Mr. Jones. It was he who pointed it out in the first place and when one reads the books carefully it becomes apparent more and more.

I have already sent for a copy of the second volume of "Fiery World" and shall be ever so interested to read it, but taking to heart the injunction mentioned, I do feel that to meditate more on the wealth of material available in so many directions, is the more primary need.

> (Omitted a paragraph on the weather) -

"How greatly must consciousness be expanded in order to comprise all vast affirmations and to understand all tasks".

"May the Great Purpose be fulfilled in all our lives and worlds. I am a part of the Manifestation of the Infinite Being, a willing instrument of the Universal Lord. IN HIS NAME I affirm that greater Unity, Beauty, Truth, Goodness and Love, greater Knowledge, Wisdom and Power for their sakes and greater Bliss as the Reward be realized in all beings on this planet, and throughout all Time and Space and Motion. To this end let all things prosper".

Of "all vast affirmations" there can be none vaster than this - higher, deeper or wider, or more inclusive. The world is travelling that Path now, always has done, and always will do - "the way of the endless march". How glorious that all creatures have their part to play in such a Plan! Those who are truly enlightened more and more envision it with ever-increasing clarity, and always there is the call to action, to become more attentive, more observant, so that the potentialities of spirit may be realized - made real.

We can't be thankful that so much help and inspiration is poured upon us every day, and go forward with patience and fortitude and joy.

Wishing you the richest blessings,

Sincerely,
